WHO IS VICTOR E. WILDCAT?

For years, students wandering the halls have wondered who is under the mask of Victor E. Wildcat, prancing around football games, and the occasional pep assembly. After some in-depth investigative journalism, the Wildcat Chronicle has finally unmasked West Chicago's beloved mascot. Who is it? Look for the clues throughout this publication. The answer may surprise you.

First clue: On the first day of school, Victor comes to school in pajama pants and a t-shirt. After experiencing first days of school before, Victor has finally realized that he doesn't have to dress to impress anymore.*

Victor is...

After searching for clues, find out who Victor E. Wildcat is in our senior collage on the back page.

Postcards

Senior editors Jessica Bergmann (News Editor) and Greg Vodicka (Editor in Chief) have written letters to the senior class as a final goodbye. Second clue: Victor performed at the Mr. Wildcat competition where he sang both Chris Brown and Rihanna, danced, showed off his karate moves, modelled, and answered an absurdly long question about how he would spend his day with Mr. Martino.

As the end of the year quickly approaches, many seniors continue to count down to the one day of high school that actually matters: graduation. But what's the big rush? High school, according to my parents and just about every movie I've seen, is supposed to be the best years of your life. So why is everyone so anxious to leave? From football games to powder puff, homecoming to prom, I can't honestly think of one thing that I would change from my high school experience, except maybe the fact that I cannot listen to my iPod while walking down the hallway. Entering high school as a freshman with a backpack twice my size, I had no idea how I was supposed to survive the four years that were facing me. Yet, high school is where I've made the friends I consider family. From going to Chili's and drinking kiddy cocktails to surviving a 15-hour bus ride to Mobile County, Ala., the times I've shared with my friends have been ones that I'll never forget. Even more importantly than just meeting friends was partaking in experiences that have changed my life. Not only did high school give me the chance to travel to France and experience a new culture, but it opened the door to a world of volunteering like Operation Snowball, Habitat for Humanity, and Relay for Life. As the days get scarcer and graduation continues to approach faster, I just want to personally say thank you to every senior I've had a genuine conversation with, every teacher who's ever come in early to help me understand a project, and every person in the building who works hard and puts forth effort to help students achieve. So, seniors, I look forward to walking on the stage this year, declaring myself a graduate of the class of 2009. But just remember, high school really is the best years of your life, so enjoy the last few days while you can. Because, honestly, who's looking forward to writing 20 page term papers and having exams practically every week in college?

Driving down Washington Street smelling fresh cut grass and blasting some Tim McGraw in my beat-up Chevy, I realize summer is just around the corner, and soon, I'll flip to the next chapter in my life story. Finally, we get to move on from West Chicago to bigger and better things, what we all have been working for our entire high school careers. But is this how we thought we would feel? Trying our hardest to grow up for 18 years now, yet wishing we had just a little more time to be a kid, we realized everything we've taken for granted. If I could write a letter to myself at 14 there is so much I wish I could say. Don't take yourself too seriously. Make a variety of friends. Stay out of as much drama as possible. Think before you make life-changing decisions. All these are great tips that I'm sure everyone has heard hundreds of times. They go in one ear, out the other. Thinking about how I felt only four short years ago going into high school, I realized how fast it has gone by. Games under the lights, bonfires on the weekends, sledding at Winwood, and fireworks at Reed Keppler, will never be forgotten. Walking in as a freshman you think you have forever in front of you, and it's hard to see past Friday night. After four years of dances, girls, fights, and drama, I've come to realize that all that nonsense doesn't matter. As we walk the halls these last days of school going into our last summer together, we pretend that our days are not numbered. We pretend that cruising around in a packed car rocking out to The Kid, and lying out under the stars planning road trips will never end. The day that we realize it will be months before we see each other again and even longer until we get the chance to spend another lazy summer of pick-up games and pick-up lines will be the same day we say goodbye as we venture out to the beginning of our young adult lives. All I can do now is savor every day we have left. We aren't getting any younger, and we're growing up too fast. As lectures, term papers, work, and bills become a future reality, I look back at how carefree my high school career has been and wish I could take a round two. Stressing over pointless drama and insignificant fights was a waste of time that could have been better spent camping in back yards and laser tag Tuesdays at Brunswick. Some say these are the best days of our lives, and I don't necessarily agree, but why risk it? Take advantage of what high school has to offer and live with no regrets. Anything that doesn't go exactly the way you expected is a lesson learned and a note taken for when it really matters. I don't regret any "mistakes" I might have made, or any slip-ups I wish I had avoided because these are all lessons and memories I wouldn't trade for the world.

Advice

Don't let other people hurt your feelings, enjoy what's yours before it's gone.
-- Molly Cody

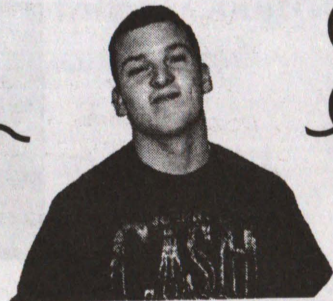

Play sports, they get you a lot of friends.
-- Ivan Desfassiaux

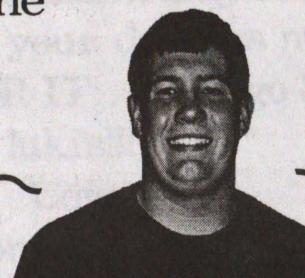

Learn to balance your social life with your education. Do your homework, but don't forget to have fun with your friends at the football games.
-- Krupscaya Stevens

Don't take anything too seriously. It's not as big of a deal as you think.
-- Patrick Stremel

Go for it! No club is uncool so do it all. If you play a sport put in the work, it's worth it for the pay-off.
-- Michael Dylla

Sarah,
You have become a wonderful young woman. As Yoda says, "Much wisdom have you learned, accomplished much you shall." We can't wait to see what you do with your life. Rock On! Excellent!
We love you,
Mama
and Daddy

Once a princess, always a princess.....

Tara,

We knew on November 11, 1990 at 10:35 p.m. that someone very special had just come into our lives, and you have been proving it to us ever since! You are a spectacular young woman with a brilliant future just waiting for you. Go and get it! Remember, being "successful" isn't measured by your career, it's measured by your character, your personal integrity, the respect you have for yourself and others, your compassion, your ability to forgive with grace and your ability to love well and accept love from others. Tara, you are a success already! We are so proud of you and we love you very much! Congratulations Baby!

Love,
Mom and Dad

"Congratulations Bayless!"
Whatever your dreams may be - GO FOR IT.....and go Salluki's!!!

Love,
Mom and Dad
